“ I disagree. For example in a play party situation where the two parties involved do not know each other outside the scene there is no obligation for the top to care for the bottom unless it was negotiated along with something else. It is also not the top's responsibility if the submissive has a dominant partner they need to go to them. That's why it's the submissive's job to make sure that if they need aftercare that they find it before playing with the play partner or from someone else. The top needs to make sure they have aftercare also if they need it but not always.
