“Greed knows no bounds. Those who prey on grieving spouses will know their Judgement Day. Edie improved the lives of many people. Some of those people came back to Cherry Ave and claimed a piece of Del's property, in the name of "remembrance". The blood family of Delvin Sylvester call it THEFT. These stolen assets, leveraged away from a grieving spouse, should have been left in place. Del is alone now. Who will write the property tax checks? Who will pay Edie's debt? Those stolen porcelain dolls could have helped Del stay in his home. Del has family. Del had assets. Those valuables were taken from him, during his greatest hour of incoherent grief. Edie would be highly upset with her "friends" for stealing from Del. Not a Christian VALUE. Edie would give a warm blanket and a place to stay for any stray that wandered in. The same people that Del and Edie helped, came back and took advantage of their familiarity with the property. They cleaned out Del's assets with no regard to his future financial needs. Edie would be ashamed of these predators. Forgiveness of a thief does not pay the bills.

“ Hi Sis, You're home now with Dad, Mom, Fern and Sonny and of course the rest of our family and friends. You left us a suddenly before we were ready, but I guess God needed you more there than here. His mission for you here on earth was completed. You will be missed by all of us here family and friends. You may be gone in body but you're spirit will always be with us in our hearts and minds. Love you Sis

“ I will miss Aunt Edie desperately. She was always a safe and loving place for me. I will always cherish the time that I lived with her and Uncle Del. She taught me several valuable life lessons. She truly lived life and loved people, especially her family. She knew how to spoil her nieces and nephews. Although I wish I had more time with her, I am confident that I will see her again. Heaven must be a REAL party now, and she is probably already busy spoiling my brother. I love you, Aunt Edie and am forever grateful for your love and presence in my life.
