“ Stan was one of the most wonderful people. He always had extreme kindness for everyone around him and was very thoughtful of others. Stan was so respectful of others and would go out of his way to make people feel good about themselves. When someone would do something nice for him, he would get a childlike wonderment in his eyes. He was a very hard worker and always had a new goal to attain in life. Some of the fondest memories would be sitting with him and learning about his life as he rolled his own cigarettes while giving the warning to never start smoking. If Stan taught the world anything other than kindness it would be this: don't judge a book by its synopsis...read it for its entirety because you will learn so much more...and make a friend along the way!

“ This is so shocking as I didn't even know Stan was ill. In Cape Girardeau my time together with Stan showed me what true kindness and thankfulness a person can be. Stan became a very kind hearted person. Much love with my heart hurting even more with another loved one lost.
