“ I can remember wayy back.... when I was 4 or 5. Daddy got me a lovely chest of drawers. It needed some TLC and he wanted to paint it for me. He asked me what colour I wanted. I told him rainbow! SO what did he do? He painted that chest of drawers all the colours of the rainbow, one coat at a time. He put a white coat on top of all the colours. Then when the paint peeled you could see the rainbow underneath!! I absolutely loved it. I wish I still had it today. <3 <3 <3 I can remember going to cut firewood in the forest with him, it was winter time, and we had to haul the dead tree home. It was cold work and I asked him a few times "How much farther" heehee. I'd give anything to go cut wood in the snow with him again. I can remember sledding with him through the woods outback our house on Katawissa road. In the summer my daddy would barbecue out on the patio, at the side of the house. I remember Uncle John had come down for the barbecue. There are soo many happy memories of my daddy. When he would get up to get ready for work and have his favorite country music playing. When he took us to the meetings, and especially the assemblies and conventions. :( :( :( :( Its going to be soo hard without him, but I know he is safe in Jehovahs' memory, awaiting the resurrection. I can't wait to see him again in paradise. <3 <3 <3 I love you daddy <3 <3 <3

:'( :( I am sick too, I can't seem to stop crying or stay out of bed. I don't make sense when talking at times. I keep getting this perpetual headache and feelings of nausea. It just doesn't seem real, he can't be gone. He just can't. :( :( :(

“ Since no one seems to want to share, I will share my memory of the first time I met my husband. He was 11 years old and I was 13. The first thing he said to me was, "Will you marry me?" He persisted with that question for 10 more years until when he was finally 21 years of age, I said yes. He has been my life long companion from that early time and now 48 years later, he is gone. I will never forget him and I will never replace him. I hope that in the coming resurrection promised to us (John 11:25), that both he and I will be together in the new paradise on earth governed by a just and loving heavenly father, Jehovah. In that kingdom, no one will have sorrow, pain or death according to the Bible. (Revelations 21:3-4) I want to be there for him once again as his life long helpmate as we were once before. Goodbye my love. I hope to see you once again and be happy together in Jehovah's kingdom forever.
